

Contents

1	The Status of the Geological Sciences Circa 1800	1
1.1	Debating Definitions	1
1.2	The Neptunism/Plutonism Debate and the Role of Religion in European Geology	7
1.3	The Religion of Geology: Silliman, Hitchcock and New England Geology	12
1.4	Challenges and Opportunities for Women in Geology	18
	References	23
2	The Popularization of Science	27
2.1	Overview	27
2.2	Defining the Familiar Format in Science Writing	30
2.3	Early Women Authors of the Familiar Format	40
	References	47
3	Jane Haldimand Marcet (1769–1858): The Queen of the Familiar Format	51
3.1	Biographical Overview	51
3.2	Conversations for Children; on Land and Water (1838)	56
3.3	Adaptation and Copyrights in Nineteenth Century America	62
	References	68
4	Maria Hack (1777–1844): Contrivance and Conversation	71
4.1	Biographical Overview	71
4.2	Geological Sketches, and Glimpses of the Ancient Earth (1832)	74
4.3	William Paley and the Education of Harry Beaufoy	81
	References	86
5	Jane Kilby Welsh (1783–1853): Faith and Family	89
5.1	Biographical Overview	89
5.2	Familiar Lessons in Mineralogy and Geology (1832–33)	91
5.3	Criticisms of the Familiar Format and Its Female Authors	100
	References	106

	Influence of Mentors	118
	References.	124
7	Delia Woodruff Godding (1812–61): Poetry and Perseverance	127
	7.1 Biographical Overview	127
	7.2 First Lessons in Geology (1847)	132
	7.3 Poetry and Geology	139
	References.	149
8	Almira Hart Lincoln Phelps (1793–1884):
	Textbooks and the Female Seminary.	153
	8.1 Biographical Overview	153
	8.2 Lectures to Young Ladies (1833).	156
	8.3 The Child’s Geology (1832)	158
	8.4 The Politics of Textbooks	164
	References.	170
9	Alternatives to the Familiar Format	173
	9.1 Changing Audiences	173
	9.2 Mary Roberts (1788–1864): Young Earth Literalist	174
	9.3 Rosina Zornlin (1795–1859): Adapting to the Audience.	178
	9.4 Mary Somerville (1780–1872): A Woman of Science.	183
	References.	188
10	The Extinction of the Familiar Format	191
	10.1 Overview	191
	10.2 Arabella Buckley (1840–1929): Entering The Fairy-land of Science	194
	10.3 Agnes Giberne (1845–1939): The Lingering Influence of Religion on Geology	198
	10.4 Lady Grace Anne Prestwich (1832–99): Echoes of Mary Somerville	204
	References.	207
11	Conclusion	209
	References.	211
	Index.	213